Restaurant facilities near the WTO

A variety of options are available for dining in or around the WTO

Budget: The cafeteria of the World Meteorological Organization offers a lovely terrace with beautiful views on the Lemman Lake along with lunch options ranging from 12 to 20 CHF. It is open from 12:30 to 14:30 and can be accessed upon presentation of a valid ID. For a quick bite, the café located in the atrium offers all sorts of beverages, sandwiches and salads. There is also a canteen in the new building. Across the street from the WTO (next to the Jardin Botanique stop), there is a small supermarket which is also a popular destination for those interested in fresh sandwiches and salads at reasonable prices.

Mid-range: Barton's Parc cafeteria adjacent to the WTO has many lunch options at prices ranging from CHF14-25. If you are looking for sit-down dining, a Chinese buffet is available at the Tsing Tao Restaurant (12 avenue de Secheron) around the corner from the small supermarket (the buffet costs approximately CHF22 and lunch menus CHF15). There is also a Lebanese restaurant (Layalina, 121 rue de Lausanne). The Hotel Eden restaurant (135 rue de Lausanne) offers Swiss/French/Italian eating. Like most restaurants in Geneva, a reasonably-priced lunch menu or suggestion of the day can be found.

Currency

The currency in Switzerland is the Swiss Franc, often written as CHF or SFr. While the Euro is accepted at most shops and businesses, it is better to exchange your money in advance so as to avoid paying a higher rate. Many smaller stores and supermarkets do not accept credit cards and those that do may ask to see photo ID and charge you. You can get cash in the WTO building at the UBS ATM.
